

SyberWorks Media Center Debuts New Article - “Documentation and e-Learning Part 4: Get Real!—Use the Web’s Eyes”

Waltham, Massachusetts – April 7, 2010

SyberWorks, Inc., a leader in custom e-Learning Solutions and the Learning Management System (LMS) industry, today announces an article available in the SyberWorks Online Media Center: “Documentation and e-Learning Part 4: Get Real!—Use the Web’s Eyes,” by Dave Powell, Documentation Manager for SyberWorks, Inc.

Mary Kay Lofurno, Director of Marketing at SyberWorks, states:

“In Part 4 of this series, Dave Powell talks about using real time, streaming video content that allows students to explore in online training courses. He sites examples such as using <http://lasiktv.com> in an eye doctor training course or using <http://www.volcanolive.com/volcanocams.html> in an e-learning course on volcanoes and others. The thrust of the article is to encourage instructional designers and e-learning developers to use online, real time or near real time events to spark student inquisitiveness and increase learner engagement.”

The article is located in the SyberWorks Online Media Center at <http://www.syberworks.com/articles/documentation-and-elearning-part4-article.htm>.
