

SyberWorks e-Learning Podcasts: Episode #19: Tips on Using Graphics in e-Learning

Waltham, Massachusetts – April 8, 2008

SyberWorks, Inc., a leader in custom e-Learning Solutions and the Learning Management System industry, today announces the next episode in their e-Learning Podcast Series: “Tips on Using Graphics in e-Learning.”

Dave Boggs, CEO of SyberWorks, states:

“Today’s podcast is an interview with Al Lemieux, Senior Designer at SyberWorks, on the subject of using graphics in e-Learning. In this episode, Al discusses highlights from his article on the same subject, including important graphic factors like image size, content hierarchies, appropriate imagery, and more.”

Boggs continues, “Graphics can make or break an online course. But this area of e-Learning development is often overlooked or shortchanged, because many people feel it’s only a matter of choosing appropriate looking pictures or images. Al’s article also offers a lot of great information about more advanced aspects of the subject, including image compression schemes and the use of charts and graphs.” Mary Kay Lofurno, Director of Marketing at SyberWorks, narrates the series.
