

SyberWorks LMS e-Learning Implementation Podcast 25: SyberWorks LMS e-Learning Implementation Podcast Discusses Leadership, Employment, and Job Search Training for the Chilkoot Indian Association of Alaska

Waltham, Massachusetts – April 6, 2009

SyberWorks, Inc., a leader in custom e-Learning Solutions and the Learning Management System (LMS) industry, today announces the next episode in their LMS e-Learning Implementation Podcast Series: “Interview with Robert Whitcomb of Chilkoot Indian Association.”

Dave Boggs, CEO of SyberWorks, states:

“This podcast is a fascinating look at an organization’s reaction to their need for leadership training and succession planning. In this episode, Mary Kay Lofurno, Marketing Director of SyberWorks, interviews Robert Whitcomb, Director of Human Resources for Alaska’s Chilkoot Indian Association., about their use of the SyberWorks Learning Management System to track and manage job skills training, tribe leadership training, and employment training. The podcast also describes how the Chilkoot Indian Tribe plans to use e-Learning to preserve and pass down their culture to their young people.”

About the Chilkoot Indian Association

The constitution and by-laws of the Chilkoot Indian Association Tribal government were ratified on December 5th, 1941. A seven-member IRA Tribal Council represents the Association, which has a current membership of 485 Alaskan Natives and American Indians. The Tribal Council is recognized by the federal government as the official Tribal governing body for the predominately Tlingit Natives of Haines, Alaska. (Membership is open to all Alaskan Natives and American Indians who are permanent residents of Haines).

Today, the Tribe has a two-million-dollar annual budget and employs 12 full-time office staff. The Tribe has developed all the departments required for its government, including: Housing and Transportation, Culture and History, Economic Development, Human Resources and Organizational Development, Accounting and Finance, and Administration.
