

SyberWorks Announces New Academy and Single-Course Schedule Simulator Options

Waltham, Massachusetts – May 12, 2009

SyberWorks, a leader in custom e-Learning Solutions and the Learning Management System industry, announced today that they have developed two new options—Single-Course and Academy simulations—to augment their Schedule Simulator Module.

Dave Boggs, CEO of SyberWorks, states:

“The schedule simulator was initially developed to allow administrators to enter, simulate, adjust, and commit complex classroom schedules that involve multiple courses on a campus, where many students and instructors are scheduled for multiple classrooms at various training locations.”

Boggs adds, “Our new Single-Course simulation option allows administrators to enter, simulate, adjust, and commit complex classroom schedules that involve a single campus course. This is perfect for an organization that needs to offer and schedule one course across many different locations with different instructors. The Academy simulation option allows administrators to enter, simulate, and adjust complex classroom schedules for law-enforcement Academies, which have very different schedule and staffing constraints than corporations. Those constraints include required staffing prerequisites, adjusting and accounting for police personnel serving overseas in the military, and more.”

He continues, “These two new simulation options really round out the Schedule Simulator Module and make it a multipurpose scheduling tool for the SyberWorks Learning Management System.” For more information about the SyberWorks Learning Management System and its Schedule Simulator Module, please call 888-642-7078 or email info@syberworks.com.
