

SyberWorks has been awarded a 5-year contract by the General Services Administration (GSA) for work under Schedule 69 for Training Services

Waltham, Massachusetts – October 14, 2004

SyberWorks, a leader in custom e-Learning Solutions and the Learning Management System industry, announced today they have been awarded a 5-year contract by the General Services Administration (GSA) for work under Schedule 69 for Training Services.

Dave Boggs, CEO of SyberWorks, states:

“We are thrilled to be offering online course authoring and development services under the GSA Schedule 69 for Training Services. Our recent GSA Schedule 70 Award for Information Technology coupled with our Schedule 69 Award for Training Services will enable us to provide total e-Learning and online training solutions to governments, state agencies, and institutions, that purchase through the government’s primary procurement agency, the General Services Administration.”

Bob Goldschneider, Director of Business Development, says, “The GSA Schedule 69 and 70 Awards provide a firm foundation for our government business channel. Our learning management system products and training services are uniquely suited to the needs of governments, state agencies, and institutions and we are on track to grow this year by over 90% in this channel of distribution.”
