

SyberWorks has been awarded a 5-year contract by the General Services Administration (GSA) for work under Schedule 70 for Information Technology

Waltham, Massachusetts – September 8, 2004

SyberWorks, a leader in custom e-Learning Solutions and the Learning Management System industry, announced today they have been awarded a 5-year contract by the General Services Administration (GSA) for work under Schedule 70 for Information Technology.

Dave Boggs, CEO of SyberWorks, states:

“We are very excited to be offering our learning management system and custom e-Learning solutions under the GSA Schedule 70 for Information Technology. Our product set is highly robust and flexible and represents a tremendous value for the money spent. The SyberWorks Training Center application suite is uniquely suited for the custom integration necessary in government, state agencies, and institutional environments, and is set at an extremely reasonable price-point.”

Bob Goldschneider, Director of Business Development, says, “In the first half of the year, we have been gearing up and getting some real traction in our government business channel. With our new GSA Schedule 70 award, we will be able to offer our products and services at better rates to the government, state agencies, and various other institutions using the GSA Schedule to procure learning management systems and custom e-Learning solutions.”
