

SyberWorks announces the launch of its Online Media Center

Waltham, Massachusetts – December 19, 2005

SyberWorks, a leader in custom e-Learning Solutions and the Learning Management System industry, today launched the SyberWorks Online Media Center for journalists, students, and other research-oriented professionals.

Dave Boggs, CEO of SyberWorks, states:

“SyberWorks was started back in 1995 when the whole e-Learning and web-based training industry was in its infancy. The industry has gone through several consolidations and changes with the influx of various technologies and their impact on e-Learning. Along the way, we have amassed much knowledge and experience in regards to e-Learning, learning management systems, and online-training industry best practices. We developed the SyberWorks Online Media Center as a resource for journalists, researchers, and students interested in e-Learning.”

Boggs continues, “The SyberWorks Online Media Center is composed of resources such as whitepapers, articles, helpful links, and case studies on e-Learning, learning management systems, and online-training. The SyberWorks Online Media Center also contains our press releases, blogs, and industry specific news feeds. We will continue to update and add more material to the SyberWorks Online Media Center over time.”

The SyberWorks Online Media Center is located at <http://www.syberworks.com/mediacenter.htm> in the About Us section of the SyberWorks web site.
