

SyberWorks rolls out a new online survey module for the SyberWorks Training Center

Waltham, Massachusetts – March 17, 2004

SyberWorks announced the roll out of a new online surveying tool enhancing the SyberWorks Training Center.

Dave Boggs, CEO of SyberWorks, Inc., states:

“This new module will make surveying and information gathering easy for online course administrators, marketers, and instructors. The surveying tool integrates with the product’s messaging features, so in a few clicks you can quickly resend the survey to non-respondents.”

This feature set is useful in course management and projects where high survey completion rates are required to achieve the statistical relevancy of data mandated by Six Sigma and ISO9000 quality management processes.”

Bob Goldschneider, Director of Business Development at SyberWorks, Inc., says, “It’s a great addition to our product set because it allows the course administrator or marketer to obtain feedback and maintain their branded look and feel. The module is completely integrated with the rest of the database so execution and administration are a snap.”
